Colleen Nance was having more than pre-wedding jitters; she had serious doubts about marrying Kent. One indication would be the instant attraction she felt with the handsome stranger that came to her rescue outside the bar. And why didn't she just say thank you and leave instead of helping him to his hotel room – to take care of his bloody nose of course!

Joel (Frank) Burkhart thought he was seeing things. Could it be the one person he compared every woman he met to? Colleen Nance has been in his heart since high school and now here she was in front of him. Unfortunately, she didn't recognize him, but that didn't stop him from coming to her rescue when a jerk wouldn't take no for an answer.

Despite her fiancée's claim that she was not a passionate woman; Colleen finds passion and so much more in the arms of Joel. With little words spoken, these characters let their sensuality take over.

You got to love a well-written story and Ms. McDonald's talent shines through in this heart-warming tale. Her descriptions put me there. Look for more books by this author. Great Job!
