The best way to describe this paranormal romance is quirky, spooky and snarky. That's not necessarily a bad thing. The snarky part is my favorite.

Tara Cole is a woman with an attitude. And why wouldn't she be? She has a houseful of ghosts and she hasn't had sex in ten years. What she does have is a great little home in the Florida Keys, a bartending job she enjoys, and a cast of wonderful, if highly unusual, friends. And then Howard Payne shows up. Sex is finally on Tara's horizon! Unfortunately, so is a voodoo curse. A girl can't get a break.

The first few chapters seem to ramble a bit, but when the author gets to the story, things start happening, and the action doesn't slow down until you reach the end. A strangely satisfying end that includes an exorcism, a death, and a great party. That's all I can say without revealing too much.

If you like strange characters and sarcasm, this could very well be the book for you. A thoroughly enjoyable, light-hearted read once you waded through the first few chapters, with some laugh-out-loud moments.
